SPRING RARE BOOK SALE

WEDNESDAY MARCH 11TH, 2020
Sold by the Irish Players at £100 towards a building to save Sir Hugh Lane’s Great Gift of Pictures for Ireland April 1913

Look up in the sun’s eye, and give what the exalted heart calls good. That some new day may breed the best, because you gave not what they would, but the right tug for an eagle’s nest.

Madam Connolly: There is the use of calling it a loan, when I know I never will see it again. It might as well earn me the value of a charity.

Denis Wheatley (1897 - 1977) was a prolific and highly successful writer of detective fiction, one of the world’s best-selling authors from the 1930s to the 1960s. In 1936 he embarked on a completely new type of novel - a mystery in which the readers were offered facsimiles of what purported to be original documents and artefacts, providing them with enough clues to solve a crime themselves. Murder off Miami was the prototype, in which a detective investigates the disappearance of English tycoon Bolitho Blane from a yacht off the Florida coast in 1936. Despite the time of English tycoon Bolitho Blane from a yacht off the Florida coast in 1936. Despite the time

Anti-Popery Broadsides
Large Sheet, 76 x 50 cm, containing 18 illustrations of the iniquities of the Roman Catholic Church. Entitled “Popery as it used to be, is, and ever will be, or, the Mysteries of the Inquisition unveiled.” Published by G. Peirce, 310, Strand [London]. Given away with no. 1 of ‘The Mysteries of the Inquisition. Price one penny.’ The 18 illustrations spare no details of the cruelty and perversion attributed to the Roman clergy: “The Popish Hot Water Cure” depicts a bound victim having boiling water poured over his feet; In “The Popish Torture Chamber” a young woman in tormented with a snake, revealing her bare legs as she writhes in disgust; In “The Popish Confessional” a priest touches up a young female penitent - and so on. This broadsheet was issued to accompany George Peirce’s serial publication in 1844-45 of his translation of Les Mystères de l’Inquisition by G. de Fereal (the pseudonym of poetess Victoire Germillon), a novel about the 16th-century Spanish Inquisition. A rival translation by G.W.Mac A. Reynolds was published simultaneously in his London Journal; both versions sold well and helped to fuel English romophobia in the years leading to the re-establishment of the Catholic hierarchy in 1850. "A Plunger of the Past"

Manuscript: Donegal (Marquis of) A manuscript account (3 folio pages) of the spendthrift life style and marital affairs of George (Recte Arthur) Chichester, first Marquis of Donegall (1739 - 1799) and of his son the second Marquess (1769 - 1844). A tabloid style narrative written c. 1850, with some politically incorrect references to persons traditionally associated with money lending. Curiously, the writer failed to record the problem associated with the second Marquess's wife - the daughter of a Co. Waterford baronet he had met when imprisoned for debt - who turned out to be both under age and illegitimate. As a m/s/s, w.a.f. Interesting document. (1)

AN EXCLUSIVE FROM SADDAH HUSSEIN GODLEY (John, Lord Kilbracken), freelance journalist.

An interesting collection of documents concerning his work 'scoop' during the height of the Iran-Iraq war in 1982, including original telex messages sent to the London Times from his hotel in Baghdad giving details of his astonishing interview with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq, with a later account of his journey on House of Commons notepaper. John Godley (1920-2006) came of a distinguished family of Irish-based British peers and scholars. Educated in England, he served in the Fleet Air Arm during World War II. Afterwards he became a freelance journalist, using his extensive contacts to pursue exclusive stories. In 1950, on the death of his father, he became the third Baron Kilbracken and took his seat in the House of Lords. The following year he moved to Killegar House in Carrigallen, Co. Leitrim, where he renovated the family home and farmed the land organically, while continuing to seek out journalistic stories. In the 1970s he renounced his British citizenship and became an Irish citizen, in protest at British policy in Northern Ireland.

In July 1982 Kilbracken went to Baghdad where he had been promised an exclusive interview with President Saddam Hussein. After some days' delay, during which his movements were restricted, he was considering returning home, but on the morning of 14 July he was brought to see Saddam and given a brief interview. Saddam told him of escalating tensions with Iran, and said he expected an invasion shortly. Kilbracken says he had not expected to like Saddam, whose record was mixed by Western standards, but found immediately he had real charisma and charm. Saddam said he could only spare a few minutes, but agreed to see Kilbracken at greater length that evening. At about eleven pm local time, Saddam emerged from his War Room and told Kilbracken that Iranian forces had crossed the border an hour previously, seeking to advance towards the oil town of Basra, and there was heavy fighting. Kilbracken described him as 'relaxed and smiling, confident of victory'. The story ran on the front page of the Times next morning, a major world exclusive.

The collection include a telex from the London foreign desk, asking Kilbracken to 'steer clear of cable/e' (standard abbreviations used by journalists), as it wastes time in extensive rewriting (evidently they were holding the front page to include his story). A most interesting collection, recording one of the great 'scoops' in modern journalism. (1)

The auctioneer advises all prospective buyers that live auctions are subject to technical issues that are beyond the control of the auctioneers and as such the auctioneer cannot guarantee the accuracy of bids placed online. Absentee bidding and telephone bidding are available as an alternative to live bidding and does not incur any additional surcharge to the buyer. Issues relating to live bidding including initial registration should be addressed directly by the purchaser with the live auction host.
